

Carissa Elmstrand lives on a farm outside North Branch with her husband and son. She raises animals on pasture and when not working on her own farm, works on her in-law's strawberry and pumpkin farm. She has been an owner of City Center Market for two years. Before moving to North Branch she worked in customer service at the food co-op in Duluth. She was drawn to serving on City Center Market's Board of Directors because she loves what the co-op represents in the community and wanted to be a part of that in a bigger way.
